[FROM THE DUBLIN NATION.] A LITTLE BONNET. There, is a little bonnet, I see it about town, And a little feather on it

That tosses up and down. Beneath this little bonnet Are too such jet black eyes-Oh! thou cosy little boar et-Lord! I'll waste myself in sighs!

And what wonder?-see it mooving Adown the crowded street, The little feather bowing o'er it, Nodding to the fairy feet, Proudly goes the little bonnet, Proudly trip the little feet, And laughingly the eyes beam out On everything they meet.

Ho! clear the way, fasle curls, With your faded beauty tricks! Ho! clear the way, ye suckers, Of the white nobs of your sticks!

Ho! smokers of Havanas, Stop your passing e'er that eye Puts a stopper on your fire With its liquid brilliancy.

Proudly goes the little bonnet, Proudly step the little feet, And laughingly the eyes beam out On everything they meet.

We copy the following graphic and spicy sketch of the delivery of the President's Inaugural Address, from the Albany Argus:

At half past one o'clock, all being arranged, the oath of office was administered to Gen. Pierce by the Chief Justice,

"I do solemply affirm that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States,"

It will be remarked that Gen. Pierce, in taking the oath, did not, as has been ordinarily the custom, say, "I solemnly swear," but I solemnly affirm; but instead of kissing the book in Southern fashion, he raised his right band and held it aloft until the pledge was read. The whole of the ceremony was admirably carried out. When General Pierce took the oath, with head uncovered, and raising one hand to heaven, while he laid the other on the Holy Book, the spectators also uncovered, even in the snow that was falling at that time, and many of them lifted up their hands as if in an act of the most fervent devotion. It was an impressive

After this ceremony had been completed, the President stepped to the front of the platform, was greeted with enthusiastic cheers, and proceeded to deliver the Inaugural

The reading of the address was followed by loud cheering and the firing of cannon, and enthusiasm prevailed to the

The address, which the President delivered unfalteringly from memory, and without a single note, was received with great enthusiasm by the vast multitude, particularly those portions of it that asserted the Monroe doctrine, the protection of American citizens abroad, the firm adherence and his determination to carry out the fugitive slave law. Cries of good, good, and other warm expressions of admiration, were elicited from the crowd. The sentiments-the tone of address—the earnest manner in which it was spoken—his beautiful action-his manly, erect appearance-his pale cast of countenance, in which intellect and courage were the predominent features-and his clear, loud voice, distinctly heard by the remotest of his audience, all combined to make a deep impression in favor of General Pierce; and many asserted that this was the best Imagural address ever delivered from that spot. He is undoubtedly a very effective speaker. The ladies were in cestacies, and so auxious were some who happened to be in the rear to see and hear him, that they climed upon the pediments of the columns of the Capitol, to their no small danger. Although, it was a giorious spectacle of sublime majesty, casting into the shade the idie pomp and unmeaning pageantry of the coronation of kings

The address was delivered by Gen. Pierce, after taking off his overcoat, amid immense cheering, just exactly as if he were delivering an extempore speech. It will be remembered that Presidents Tayler, Polk, and others, read their addresses from the manuscript. When he came to that part of his address which related to the protection of American citizens abroad, he turned face to face with Mr. Fillmore and the diplomatic corps, and laid down the law with thrilling emphasis, and when he again turned to the mass of the people in front, occupying the vast square below, they shouted with delight, and every man of fifty thousand in the streets declared that Pierce is the man for the President Pierce is a graceful and striking speaker, and his voice was clear and distinct, and his style of delivery was excellent. He has appeared remarkably eclastic, cool and self possessed for the last few days; but especially to-day. He rose at daylight and has been busy the entire day, and he evidently feels that he has the game in hand and

THE NEW POSTMASTER GENERAL.—The Hon. James Campbell, of Pennsylvania, selected by Gen. Pierce to preside over the Post Office Department, will, we do not hesitate to predict, prove one of the best selections that could have been made for that important post. It is getting to be the most laborious department of the government, with its thirty thousand appointments, and its constantly increasing patronage, improvements, and the accumulating wants of the whole community. The publie interests pertaining to it are eminently progressive; and they are interests, too, about which the American people are perhaps more tenacious than those connected with and controlled by any other branch of the government. To administer its duties with success and general satisfaction requires constant vigilance, untiring industry, much legal knowledge and experience, and in its practical aspects, firmness of purpose, well tempered with courtesy of manner and sound discretion. Upon the discreet or indiscreet management of this department greatly depends the popularity or unpopularity of the entire admin stration. The important experiment of low postage, as well as other matters of reform, renders it peculiarly a responsible post at this time, requiring energy, close application, and an enlightened policy on the part of its official head.

Judge Campbeil is not, perhaps, so extensively known throughout the country as some other gentlemen who might have been selected, the official positions which he has heretofore occupied not having been such as to bring him conspicuously before the nation at large. But, as a prominent member of the bar of his own State, and as a Judge, and, in fact, in every station of responsibility in which he has been placed, he has discharged his duties with ability and great fidelity. In all business transactions he is straightforward and prompt, with a frank and pleasing address, and a constitution which even the hard and incessant labor of that department cannot easily impair. - New York Herald.

AFFECTING INCIDENT-A MASTER'S LIFE SAVED BY HIS SLAVE .- On Sunday last, Mr. G. McCann, while crossing the Mississippi river alone in a canoe, from Battle Island to his plantation, whither he had been on a visit to his friend and neighbor on the Island, Ben. Hardin, Esq., was upset in the middle of the river, he clung to the canoe until he had floated opposite to the wood yard on his farm, when his cries attracted the attention of one of his negro | lish language. It is the palpable realization of Old men, the boy immediately put off in a skiff, to the rescue of his master. Before the negro arrived, Mr. McCann had become exhausted, and sunk. The faithful negro succeeded, however, at the imminent peril of his own life, in reaching his master, which he did by seizing him by the hair, and took him into the skiff. Mr. McCann was in an insensible state, and life was nearly extinct. By the assiduous attentions of the servant, and the application of such restoratives as were at hand, he was brought to consciousness. On Wednesday, when the John Simonds passed his plantation, he was slowly recovering. This is another fact to illustrate the truth of history, tonching the social and moral condition of the master and the slave. -St. Louis Republican.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

TUESDAY MORNING, MARCH 15, 1853.

MR. McCLELLAND.

The Banner the other day stated that this gentleman, who holds the position of Secretary of the Interior, had voted for the Wilmot Proviso. We had supposed that no one, acquainted with the politicians of Michigan, doubted the soundness of Mr. McClelland on the compromise question. He is the warm and devoted friend of Gen. Cass, whose identity with the compromise measures partisan malice itself can not question, and whose argument against the Wilmot Proviso in his letter to Mr. Nicholson, and also, in his speech in the Senate in 1850, is so indelibly impressed upon the popular memory. Political affiliations like these should of itself fix his conservative position. We are not, however, left to such arguments. In 1850, Mr. McClelland was President of a Democratic State Convention in Michigan, at which the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That this Convention tender to the people of the United States, an expression of carnest congratulation of the passage by Congress, and their approval by the Presi dent of the United States, of the series of measures by which California has been received into the family of States, territorial government established for New Mexico, Utah, and the boundary line of Texas adjusted. That we buil the adoption of these measures, alike just and equitable to all, by which the country has been restored to harmony, as a triumph of wisdom over sectional strife in our common conn-

Shortly after the nomination of Gen. Pience, Mr. McClelland was the nominee of the democratic convention of Michigan for Governor. The convention which nominated him, adopted the follow-

"Rewleel, That the recent measures of compromise, em-bracing a settlement of the distracting questions which have disturbed, and almost interrupted the business of Congress, seriously threstening the integrity of the Union itself, were demanded by a fair consideration of the constitutional rights of the various members of the confederacy.

"Resolved, That the democracy of Michigan pandering to no rsus, rejecting all alliances with sectional factions, have ing in view the irrepealable claims of each State in this Uxion, and yielding only to the demands of the constitution, leclare emphatically, that the compromise measures stand justified in the eyes of every well wisher of his country, and ould be sustained and executed in all their parts faithfully,

Mr. McClelland during the entire canvass, proclaimed himself a compromise man, and eloquently sustained these resolutions of the convention. It would be difficult for any one to present on the compromise a cleaner record than is found in the endorsement and support of resolutions like these, Yet he will be assailed. Party feeling warps and blinds men so, that partisans are rarely capable of doing justice to an opponent. It is a fortunate thing that the public man has an appeal from the distorted judgments and jaundiced injustice of mere partisans to the sober, settled and intelligent verdict of the

THE INAUGURAL.

We have been much pleased to notice the general satisfaction expressed by the press with reference to this sterling document. Democrats are all-with the exception of a few abolition agitators, who are only nominally in the party, and ought to leave itdelighted with its clear and patriotic principles.-The neutral press seem scarcely less pleased. As for the whig press their blows fall weak and nerveless. The tone of their notices leave no doubt of "a willingness to strike," but the document is so unassailable that their ingenuity is baffled, and whig editors retire sullen and discomfited from their intended demonstration. We give in our columns to-day, extracts from some of the democratic press of this State, from which it will be seen that in Tennessee the inaugural gives entire satisfaction to the democracy.

THE WHIG PARTY DISSOLVED.

A correspondent of the Bunner, in urging the claims of W. N. Bilbo, Esq., of this city, for State

"If we neglect such whigs, will it not dissolve

This is indeed a fearful interrogatory. The writer, it is clear, thinks that it will. If the whig party is contingent upon the nomination of Mr. Bilbo for State Senator, we feel but little hesitancy in expressing the opinion that the hour of its dissolution is near at hand. Mr. Bilbo is a great favorite of ours. In fact he is one of our pets. But we don't think he is appreciated by his party friends.

of Jane Eyre and Shirley. We are also indebted to these gentlemen for a fine edition of Colerhoge's Works, which we intend to notice more fully as soon as we can give it an examination.

BARNBURNERS LEAVING WASHINGTON.-A correspondent of the New York Herald says :- "Gov. Marcy, it is supposed, will disappoint the barnburners and soft shells. He has declared that, so far as his influence goes, none but a hunker will be appointed to the office of Collector of the port of New York; and it is believed that he will not favor free-soil appointments. The barnburners who were seeking office here have almost all left. The address has routed them.

THE USE OF BAD DEBTS .- An editor in Arkansas was lately shot in an affray. Luckily the ball came against a bundle of unpaid accounts in his pocket. Even gunpowder could not get through unpaid newspaper bills, and the editor saved his life by the delinquency of his subscribers. Sarely it is an ill-wind that blows nobody any good.

AMERICAN OFFICIAL SALARIES.—Several amendments were made to the Civil and Diplomatic Apheads of departments are to be raised to eight thousand dollars per annum; six thousand dollars, in addition to their present salaries, was granted to the American Ministers to Great Britain, France, Spain resident in Turkey .- Congressional Report.

THOS. H. BENTON. Gen. Jackson is reported to have said that this notorious individual lost his mind on board the Princeton, when that awful explosion took place, which hurried Upshur and Gilmer to their premature graves. We are inclined to believe that this remark of the sage of the Hermitage, like nearly all others he expressed, with reference to men, was based upon a thorough knowledge of human character. Certain it is, that from that time to the present, Mr. Benron's conduct has been as wayward as that of a spoiled beauty, and much less attractive in its poutings. In his haughty and unbending pride he has foolishly thrown away the position of a leader, and sunk by his own option into that most despicable of characters-the incendiary and disorganizer. His first, act after the inauguration of President Polk, was to assail in the bitterest sarcasm the policy of the administration with reference to Oregon- scoffing at those who asserted our title to 54-40 as mere "neophytes" who were permitted only to stand in the portico of the Temple, and not worthy to minister at the altar. When the Compromise measures, as a plan of pacification, were before the Senate he warred upon it most relentlessly, and held ap the patriots who conceived and reported it, as political Dr. Townshends, and the measures proposed as quack medicines. Beaten for the Senate he returned to Missouri and commenced the work of disorganization. Everybody who did not surrender their opinions to his whims, many of which were madder than the jests of Hamlet, were ruthlessly denounced. Party harmonysuccess of democratic principles-and every other consideration which would have controlled other men were disregarded. With an imperious egotism he made himself "the party," and finally by some unexplained combinations was elected to Congress. And we now see that he is beginning to war upon the administration of Gen. Pience-by protesting against some of the expected appointments of the President. In war, mutiny is punished by death, and the mutineers shot. In politics they should be drummed out of camp.

We are not unmindful of Col. Benton's services during the Jackson and Van Bunen administration, He deserves for these the gratitude of the people.-But those services have been more than cancelled by the misconduct of the last nine years. The brilliancy of the past but reflects a darker shade upon the present. Like Arnold, whose treason at West Point blurred the bright pages of Quebec, Saratoga, and other battle fields, or Lucifer, as portrayed by Milton, present crimes annul former virtues. "So call him now. His former name

Is heard no more in heaven," We have every confidence that President PIERCE will disregard the arrogant dictation of Col. Benton, and pursue the patriotic course marked out by

The persons who occupied the lower part of the house had been to a ball and returned in the morning and found the women dead. There is great excitement and a number of arrests have been made. On examining the bodies of the murdered women, fortyone stabs were found in Mrs. Lynch, five entering the heart, and seventeen wounds in Mrs. Show .-An attempt was made to burn the house, but the fire, after burning a hole in the kitchen floor, went out. Another Invention .- We learn by a gentleman direct from New York, that Norman Cutter, Esq., and a machinist of this city, are now in that city perfecting the model for an engine to be driven by heated air-something after the Eriesson plan, but simpler in construction and better adapted in many respects to steamboats or locomotives. The model had been completed and the trial gave a great deal of satisfaction. It is said the machinery will occupy but half the space of the Eriesson, and the cost of building and running is a great deal less. We shall probably hear more about it in a few days,-St. Louis Times.

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS .- We have seen and read, an imperfect copy, it is true, of the President's Inaugural address, which we publish to-day. Notwithstanding some whig editors affect to believe that the Inaugural is not clear upon some points, we are at a loss to discover wherein there is any equivocation. On the contrary we regard it as one of the clearest, most explicit and candid documents of the kind since the days of the patriot Jackson. Indeed it would not be in harmony with the past history of Gen. Pierce if frankness did not pervade every sentence. Loldness and candor are well known characteristics of the new President, and in his inaugural has fully met the expectations of his friends. In no part of it, is there room left for a single doubt, and every democrat with whom we have met, and who has read the inaugural is recing that a man is at the helm of government who will reform its abuses, who will protect her rights and the rights of her citizens at home and abroad; and who will in its administration "know no north, no south, no east, no west," but enforce alike every provision of the Constitution of the Reonblic, and defend and protect the rights of every ndividual and every section of the Union. Having proven himself a national democrat, in every act of his political life, we can rely upon him as a fit ruler of our common country, and rest assured that no act of his will stain its history. We may look to him with confidence to enforce our maratime rights; and redress the wrongs inflicted upon our citizens by foreign powers. No longer will our national flag be subjected to insult and injury and the wrong bmitted to by the executive of the nation. The past indicates that Gen. Pierce will "demand nothng but what is clearly right, and submit to nothing that is wrong," and up to this standard and rule must all nations come during his administration. A better day is coming than we have seen for the last four years -a day when the flag of our country must and will command more respect from other

The inaugural is in truth a model State paper, and commends itself to the warm approval of evedemocrat. Some of the questions discussed in we have alluded to, but there are others mentioned of grave importance. While Gen Pierce justly regards the importance to this government of the acquisition of "certain possessions," he is opposed to the consummation of that object in a grasping spirit and in violation of existing treaty obligations. Let every democrat read this address, and he will rise from its perusal with increased confidence if possible, in the man whom the people by an unprecedented majority have called to administer the affairs of the nation for the next four years. - Winchester Independent.

THE INAUGURAL OF PRESIDENT PIERCE.—We present to our readers this morning what may be considered a rather incorrect version of the Inaugural Address of President Pierce, and although it is a document which will speak for itself and produce a telling effect wherever it is read, we must be permitted to say a few words in its praise, not because such a thing may be expected of us as one of the humble organs of the party at whose head General Pierce now stands, but because our own heart beats responsive to its every suntiment. Its most prominent feature is the true, gennine Americanism which is visible in every sentence. No one on reading it can fail to realize the conviction that all its conceptions are those of the genuine patriot, the wise states can, the true man. It breathes a spirit and a sentiment congenial to every American heart, and although we publish the document at length, we must be permitted to isolate one or two paragraphs, as worthy of special attention.-Memphis

The Prospect.—A synopsis of the speech of Gen. Pierce at his Inauguration, shows clearly that no longer need we fear or be ashamed of our Executive. Having been elected without solicitation or wish, and chosen on account of principles, not followed as a matter of policy, but of honest conviction, Gen. Pierce commences his term of office under no compulsatory pledges, he has no one to reward because of extra exertion in his behalf, but free to obey that settled line of conduct which may best seem to promote the good of the whole Union. What little we have seen of his inaugural, we are decidedly pleased with. He expresses himself openly and to the point. We like the spirit of the man. The South can ask no more than therein allowed, and if he will carry out those recognized rights of the South under the Constitution, he will have a hearty support from every Southern section. His views of Cuba, &c., are just and proper at this time; and his devotion to the Union, will bear him on truly and mark his best policy. Yes, Gen. Pierce is destined to be a good and popular President.-He has made the right commencement, which augurs well for the future four years of service .-Chattanooga Advertiser.

THE INAUGURAL.-Mr. Pierce's inaugural address as received by telegraph is very imperfect. When a copy is received by mail we shall lay it in full, or an abstract of it, before our readers. It is due to Gen. Pierce to say that that part of the address bearing upon the Compromise is outspoken and patriotic.—Rutherford (Whig) Telegraph.

He left this city a few weeks since, in feeble health, with a hope that a voyage and the climate of Italy would restore him, but his family have now received letters conveying the sad tidings of his decease, as we have above stated .-New York Herald.

Declension of Gen. Haskell.—In the address of Gen. NEW PUBLICATIONS.

VILLETTE. BY CURRER BELL; Author of "June Eyre," "Shirley", &c. Library Edition, 12mo, muslin, Cheap edition, 8vo.

W. T. BERRY & CO. have just received -VILLETTE, By Currer Bell, author of "Jane Eyre,"

OPINIONS OF THE ENGLISH PRESS. "Literary Gazetle. "This book would have made Currer Bell famous, had she not been already. It retrieves all the ground she lost in Shirley, and will engage a wider circle of renders than Jane Eyre, for it has all the best qualities of that remurkable book. There is throughout a charm of freshness which is infinitely delightful; freshness in observation, freshness in teeling, freshness in expression. Brain and heart are both held in suspense by the fascinating power of the writer." "This novel amply sustains the fame of the author of Jane Eyre' and 'Shirley' as an original and powerful writer. 'Villette' is a most admirably written novel everywhere original, everywhere shrewd, and at heart everywhere kindly.-The men, women and children who figure throughout it have flesh and blood in them, and all are worked out in such away as to evince a very keen spirit of observation, and a fine sense of the picturesque in character."

"The tale is one of the affections, and remarkable as a picture of manners. A burning heart glows throughout it, and one brilliantly distinct character keeps it alive. The oldest man, the sternest, who is a genuine novel reader, will find it hard to get out of Madam Beck's school, when he has once entered here with Lucy Snowe, and made acquantance with the choleric, vain, childlike, and noble hearted M. Paul "Of interesting scenes and well-drawn characters, there is bundance. The characters are various, happily conceived, and some of them painted with a truth of detail rarely surpassed. The style of 'Villette' has that clearness and power which are the result of mastery over the thoughts and feelings to be expressed, over the persons and scenes to be de-"Villette' may claim the unhesitating commendations of our readers and critics. The autobiography of the heroise is at once natural, interesting, cheerful, piquant, and thoughtful. 'Villette' will repay and reward the careful reading it "Morning Chromicle "'Villette' is not only a very able but a very pleasant book. It is a tale which, though here and there it is dashed with wonder and melancholy, is as a whole cheerful and piquant; abundant in clear, clear out, strongly-drawn etchings, presenting so pleasant and effective a transcript of manners, English and Continental, that its success cannot fail to be remarkable." "Ceitic. "Its claims to distinction are in its admirable delineations of character, in its powerful descriptions in its wholesome vein of scutiment, in its spirit and vigor, and in the cirarm of a style that never grows tame and never permits the attention of the reader to flag a moment." "Everything written by Currer Bell is remarkable. She can touch nothing without leaving on it the stamp of originality. Of her three novels, this is perhaps the strangest, the most astonishing, though not the best. The sustained ability is perhaps greater in "Villette" than in its two pre-beauties; with good things for which we look to the clear sight, deep feeling, and singular though not excessive experience of life, which we associate with the name of Currer "The author of 'Jane Eyre,' and 'Shirly,' has again produced a fiction of extraordinary literary power, and of sin. guiar fascination. It is one of the most absorbing of books one of the most interesting of stories. 'Villette' will add mmensely to the author of Jane Eyre's' fame as a philosodecessors. The whole these volumes are crowded with
